Get in on Heritage in Action

Do you have historical items that you care for?
Are you interested in learning more about how to preserve and share your collection?

Come along to this special free heritage event; Heritage in Action, on Monday 16 December from 10am–3.30pm at Te Ara Ātea.

Hear from some leading professionals, who will share their knowledge and practical skills for writing engaging content, managing pests, photographing your collection, and applying for funding.

The day will start with a welcome from our Selwyn District Council Heritage team, there will then be a talk from Erna Tidy, Associate Registrar at Canterbury Museum, about practical and sustainable pest management, followed by a morning tea and networking.

Before lunch, hear from freelance writer Liz Grant on tips and tricks for keeping your visitors engaged through clever storytelling.

In the afternoon, Keeper of Photographs at the Air Force Museum of New Zealand, Matthew O'Sullivan, will teach you about photographing 3D objects and South Island Manager for New Zealand Micrographic Services (NZMS), Dr Stephen Hardman, will discuss how to attract funding for the local cultural heritage sectors.

Where and when should alcohol be sold?

We are reviewing our policy around the sale and supply of alcohol in Waikirikiri Selwyn.

Councils are required to do this regularly to ensure the policies are right for our district. Our current policy was adopted in April 2017 and is due for a review.

In August we asked for your feedback around opening times for places that sell alcohol, training requirements and whether you would like to see any limits around where places that sell alcohol can be located, or on the number of places that sell alcohol in a town or township area.

Based on your feedback we have put together a draft policy. We want to hear from you on proposed changes to restrict bottle stores from opening near educational, health, spiritual, marae and recreational facilities, training for bar staff and manager rules for club licences.

You can have your say at selwyn.govt.nz/alcoholpolicy, until 5pm Wednesday 11 December.
